

12. System Maintenance and Troubleshooting

For sensor networks to function properly and provide the necessary feedback and control functions, periodical maintenance of the network components is required. The maintenance requirements apply for the datastations and computers installed in the office as well as sensors and nodes installed in production areas on fields and in greenhouses. In this module, we will cover the most common maintenance requirements and best practices to adopt for smooth functioning of sensor networks.